INTRODUCTORY.

In a work of this character, but few words are necessary by way of preface. The book is presented to the public with the belief that it is as nearly accurate as such works can be. In a city, like ours, where improvement and change are the watch words ; it would be strange, indeed, if we did not find here and there an error in a work of this kind. While houses are removed with almost equal facility as the families that inhabit them, unavoidable mistakes and omissions will occur. Great pains has been taken to get correct information, and no labor has been spared to get matter for the work. Not a house has been passed by without making an effort to secure the names and business of its inhabitants : and when omissions occur, it will be found that the parties were absent, or those at home were unable, (and we are sorry to say sometimes unwilling,) to give the necessary information. The difficulties attending the getting up of such a work as this are very great ; still it is thought they have been successfully overcome. The citizens generally will accept our thanks for the promptness and alacrity with which they furnished the needed information.

The merits of the work will suggest themselves to all. The beautiful steel engraved map is of itself worth the price of the work, and may be set down as a decided improvement on all former Directories. The paper upon which the book is printed is better than that used heretofore, and will do good service.

The Advertisers will be pleased to see the new arrangement by which their advertisements are scattered through the work. This will be sure to make them known, as they are where they must necessarily be seen, and give their places of business a local habitation.

The statistics may be relied upon as accurate, as they were taken from the United States Census.

The work is submitted to an indulgent public, to accomplish the purpose for which it was gotten up; and, also, to remain as a memorial of what Chicago was in the middle of the Nineteenth Century.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

To PRESERVE some record of the first settlement and present condition of our city is the object of this sketch. Though its history is still fresh in the recollection of a large number of our citizens, who were the pioneers in founding the Garden City—though a sketch like this might, to some appear superfluous; still the time is coming when these living witnesses shall have passed away, and when the only evidence of its early history shall be found upon the printed page.

If our pen shall record one fact of interest to the future historian of our adopted State—one fact of interest concerning its chief city, which already controls, and will continue to control its energies and shape its destinies—if we do this, we shall be repaid for our labor and shall have accomplished our object. It is not expected that a minute detail of local matters will interest any but those who have become Illinoisians, or those who expect to make this State their place of residence. But this local history is part of the material which is necessary to make up the general history of the State and Nation, and it is the duty of the citizens of each particular locality to see to it that no material for its own history be lost, or a page left unwritten.

To those who do not care to enquire into the history of the past, the remarks which we are about to make will be uninteresting, and of course they will not take the pains to read them; but in passing we will say that we have studied some parts of our local history with fixed attention; that there may be a lesson learned from it of sufficient interest in its teachings, to point a moral if not to adorn a tale.

One word more by way of preface and we pass on to our subject: The word "Illinois," the name of our State, is derived from a tribe of aborigines inhabiting the banks of the river of that name at the time the Jesuit Missionaries first explored the West, and is understood to signify, "We are men." The word "Chicago" may be derived from two sources. It is an Indian word for Skunk, or wild Onion, a vegetable which formerly grew in abundance on the present site of the city. The probability is, however, that the river derived its name from the animal instead of the vegetable.

Our State has received a surname and is jocularly designated as the "Sucker State." The origin, I believe, is this: When the emigrants first traveled over the prairies in the southern part of the State, numerous little holes were found in them filled with water,—by what animal they were dug is not precisely known, but most probably the land crab—from these the emigrants used to drink or suck up the water, as there were no streams nearby, and hence the inhabitants were called "Suckers," and the State, the "Sucker State."

The first white men that ever visited the ground on which our city stands, of which we have a reliable account, were the Jesuit Missionary, Marquette, and his companion, Joliet. It was on their return from their first expedition to the Mississippi in 1673. Having ascended the Illinois in canoes, they passed through the slough, known to us as Mud Lake, lying between the O'Plain and the South Branch of Chicago River, and thence into Lake Michigan. Some of our citizens living among us have frequently passed from the waters that empty themselves into the Mississippi into Lake Michigan in this manner. (The damage done the shipping in our harbor in the spring of 1819, in consequence of the flood, was mainly caused by the O'Plain changing its usual course and emptying itself into the waters of the St. Lawrence instead of those of the Gulf of Mexico.) Father Marquette remained near Chicago about two years, preaching to the Indians, who were a tribe of the Mianities. He then started on a journey to Mackinac, but died on the way. On the banks of a small river (Mackinac,) within the limits of the present State of Michigan, he rested from his labors.

In the year 1682, La Salle, another adventurer whose history is more like romance than sober truth, while on his way to explore the Mississippi, as appears from the "Process Verbal" made on taking possession of Louisiana, was detained here in the country of the Mascoutines, "where the ice in the river Chickagou had arrested his progress, and where, when the ice became stronger, they used sledges to drag the baggage, the canoes, &c., through the whole length of this river."

These explorations first opened up the great Valley to the civilized world. The spirit of adventure—the desire to trade with the natives—the wish to extend the dominions of La Belle France, and, above all, the high and holy motive of planting the Cross among the savage tribes, first brought civilized man into the heart of the American wilderness.

France, it is well known, in view of the importance of these western discoveries, conceived the idea, and attempted to carry out the grand design of securing to herself the vast extent of country lying between the great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico, by means of a chain of military and trading posts extending from the St. Lawrence to the mouth of the Mississippi. In the prosecution of this design her subjects labored for years, so that in 1763 she had as many as thirty-eight of these establishments located between the points above named, and extending through the heart of the continent more than three thousand miles. Those within the limits of our State were situated, one at Chicago, two on the Illinois River near Peoria, one at Fort Chartres on the Mississippi, one at Cairo, and one at Fort Massac on the Ohio. The villages of Cahokia, Kaskaskia, Prairie du Pont, and Prairie du Rocher, were commenced by La Salle himself, and are situated in the vicinity of old Fort Chartres. The settlers were composed of Canadian French. Descendants of those early emigrants still remain in that part of Illinois cultivating the fields of their ancestors, and in the same primitive style. While the Anglo-American race have been moving onward with rail road speed to a higher state of civilization—while that race has subdued and made subservient to itself the elements of nature, there are among us the living evidences of the age of "Louis Le Grand," unchanged, and most probably, unchangeable in their natures. The steamer may pass by their doors, but they have no freight for it to bear to market; if it gets there at all it must go by the good old way—the horse and cart. While all has changed around them they have remained the same. Formerly their settlements were the little oases in the desert waste of barbarism; now, all unchanged, they are barren spots in the garden of civilization. But to proceed.

The magnificent design of France was broken up by the gallant Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham. The country remained but a few years, however, in the hands of the English, as the war of the Revolution established the authority of the U. S. over the N. W. Territory. The Indians in the vicinity were not subdued till the expedition of Gen. Wayne in 1794. In 1795 the treaty of Greenville was made by that officer, by which a tract of land six miles square and laying on the Chicago River, was ceded to the United States. In 1804 a small fort was erected by Government at the mouth of the river and furnished with three pieces of light artillery. One company was stationed here numbering about fifty men. These, with the Canadian French and Traders, amounted to about two hundred. Nothing of importance occurred till 1812, when the war broke out with England. The Indians in this vicinity sided with England and the Government being apprehensive for the safety of this post ordered its evacuation without delay. In the order, Capt. Heald, the commander of the post, was directed to distribute all of the United States property contained in the Fort, and the United States factory among the Indians in the neighborhood and repair to Fort Wayne. This order was carried out to the letter and the slaughter of the Garrison was the result.

Winnemeg, the friendly Indian who brought the order to Capt. Heald, arrived in Chicago on the 7th of August, 1812. He told the Captain that he was acquainted with the nature of the dispatches he had brought and urged upon him the propriety, under the circumstances of the case, of remaining in the Fort, as they were supplied with ammunition and provisions sufficient to last them for a long time. If he should think proper however, to evacuate the Fort, Winnemeg was of the opinion that it should be done immediately, ere the Potawatamies through whose country they would be obliged to pass, could collect a sufficient force to molest them. Capt. Heald was bent on carrying out the instructions of his superiors notwithstanding this advice. He should evacuate the Fort, but not until the public property could be distributed among the Potawatamies. The Junior Officers remonstrated against this course as being suicidal in the extreme, but to no purpose. Notice was sent to the Indians in the vicinity and on the 12th of August a council was held. Capt. Heald told them that on the next day he should distribute among them all the goods in the United States Factory, also all the ammunition and provisions. In return, he desired of them an escort to Fort Wayne, promising them on his arrival there, an additional reward. His proposals were accepted and the council broke up.

After the Council was dismissed, some knowing the hostile feeling of a greater part of the savages, urged upon Captain Heald the bad policy of placing the arms and ammunition into their hands to be used against themselves. This idea struck the Captain with so much force that without consulting any one, he determined to destroy all not required for his own immediate use. On the next day, August 13th, nothing but the goods in the factory were distributed among the Indians. In the evening, the ammunition was thrown into the well; and the contents of the liquor barrels discharged into the stream. The spare muskets were also broken up, and with shot bags, screws and gun flints thrown into the well. The next morning, Captain Wells, a brother of Mrs. Heald, arrived with fifteen friendly Miamies. On the afternoon of this day, a second Council was held with the Indians, at which they very freely showed their resentment on account of the destruction of the ammunition and liquor. They charged the whites with acts of bad faith and double dealing. The Council separated, the feelings of the Indians being aroused to a greater pitch of resentment, instead of being allayed. About nine o'clock, A. M., the next day, the 15th of August, the whole party left the Fort in military order, Captain Wells and the friendly Miamies acting as an escort. About four hundred Pottawatomies who had promised to escort them to Fort Wayne, followed at a short distance. The advance party took the beach road; they had proceeded without any symptoms of hostility as far as the sand hills, about a mile and a half from the Fort, when the Pottawatomies, instead of continuing in the rear, left the beach and brought the sand hills between their own and the American line of march. Captain Wells suspecting that it was their intention to attack him, ordered his men to form instantly and charge them. He had scarcely uttered the words ere a volley of musketry was poured in upon his little band from behind the sand hills. The troops charged up the bank with alacrity, delivered their fire, and succeeded in dislodging the Indians in their front. At the first fire the Miamies galloped off and took no part in the battle. While this charge was being made, a party were seen interposing themselves between the Americans and the Fort just left. But, notwithstanding this disheartening circumstance, they fought with great bravery until two thirds of their number were slain, when Captain Heald drew off upon the open plain and took possession of a small eminence out of reach of the enemy. The Indians called on Captain Heald to surrender, which was agreed to by him on condition that the lives of his party should be respected. The Indians complied with this condition. Captain Wells, a brave officer, was murdered after the battle; and, also, a number of women and children. This unfortunate affair was followed the next day by burning the Fort. Captain Heald was justly censured for evacuating the Fort under existing circumstances. He might have remained in the Fort where he would have been unmolested, and, certainly, if he had been, he was in a condition to have defended himself against any attack from the Indians. Had he acted with more prudence and discretion, many valuable lives would have been preserved. No attempt was made to rebuild or occupy the place, at this point, during the war. In 1817, Government rebuilt it and gave it the name of Fort Dearborn. It was occupied until 1837, since which time, the Indians having left the country, no military force has been stationed here.

We pass over the admission of Illinois into the Union as a State, and other matters which would be out of place here. One event, however, having a great influence in directing the eyes of the citizens of the older States to this point, was the grant of three hundred thousand acres of land, in the year 1820, by the United States to the State of Illinois, for the purpose of connecting the Lakes with the Mississippi, by means of a Canal. The honor of securing this magnificent grant to the State, is mainly due to Daniel P. Cook, who was the first Attorney General of the State, and Representative in Congress from 1819 to 1826. Cook County was organised in 1831, and perpetuates his name. The Counties of Will, Grundy, Kendall, Kane, Du Page, McHenry and Lake have since been formed from it. In 1830, the first lots were sold in Chicago, under the laws of the State respecting the Canal lands. The prices of lots (now the most valuable) ranged from fifty to one hundred dollars. Nothing was done, however, in the way of building until 1832 and '33. For information respecting the internal Improvement system, we must refer the reader to the history of the State. We can only give results, and the effect the legislation of the State had upon this place as a town and city. It is but just to remark, however, that the legislation of the State from 1821 to 1836, proved detrimental to the public interests in the highest degree, and plunged the State into bankruptcy; and saddled an onerous debt upon the succeeding generation.

As yet no attempts or scarcely any were made to produce a supply of the necessary wants of life at home. Every thing was brought from the East. Vessels rarely came here, and the arrival of a schooner off the town was an event of importance. There were no roads established; the wide prairie offered us many as could be desired. A weekly mail was established between this place and Niles, in 1832, which was carried on horseback. The next year a one horse wagon was substituted, and the next, four horse post coaches. In 1837, the first daily mail was established.

In 1835 and 1836, speculation reached its culminating point. Chicago was the grand center of operations. From 1834 until the latter part of the year 1836, it seemed to seize hold of all classes of citizens, and rage like an epidemic all over the country.

But it now had run its course. The bubble burst and the whole country was plunged in almost hopeless distress and ruin. From '37 to 1840 Chicago seemed to sleep the sleep of death. In that year she awoke from her lethargy, and since then she has been moving on with rapid strides to greatness. We should have mentioned that in 1837 Chicago was incorporated as a city, and Win. B. Ogden, Esq., chosen Mayor. The increase of the city of Chicago is unexampled in the history of cities in the Great Valley. By the census of 1840, it contained a population of 4,853; in 1845, 12,088; in 1850, 28,620.

Chicago, during the present year has done more for herself by way of improvement than in any one that is past. Although during the summers of 1849 and 50 the Cholera was in our midst, and other obstacles in the way of her progress, still she has successfully combated them all.

A visitor here two years since would now scarcely know Chicago. Plank Roads have been extended to the country in various directions—the Canal and Rail Road brings to our city an immensely increased amount of business and produce. These, with the magnificent Central Rail Road and the Rail Road connection with the East about to be completed after long years of hope deferred, will secure to our city wealth, population and a commanding influence in the affairs of the great West. The Common Council have done much by way of improvement, in laying down new and wider side walks, in planking the main streets, and in commencing a system of drainage which will prove highly beneficial to the health of our city.

Individual citizens in connection with the Common Council have built a secure protection against the farther encroachments of the Lake in front of Michigan Avenue, and the United States Government has erected a commodious and most beautiful retreat for the aged and infirm mariner, besides providing for a new and better Light House of cast iron. Cabs and Omnibuses were first introduced into this city this year, as also, the lighting of the streets and private residences with Gas. We cannot specify all that has been done by private enterprise, suffice it to say, that new Churches of the most splendid kind have been erected—Hotels and Brick Blocks and all kinds of dwellings have started up as if by magic in every quarter of the city. They are substantial in their structure and calculated to last when their present occupants shall be forgotten. Our Manufactories are in a flourishing state, and will compete in any market with those of other cities. We could fill a good sized volume with statistics, did time permit, but we forbear. We would love to speak of our present prosperous condition; upon what we are, and what we shall be; but not being a prophet or the son of a prophet, we would not undertake to prophesy lest we prove a false prophet.

With the people of Chicago rests the duty, the responsibility of building up on the western shore of Lake Michigan a City whose influence shall be co-extensive with the bounds of our vast Republic—an influence which like the Mississippi throwing its ten thousand arms over every portion of the Great Valley, shall reach in its ramifications the heart of every American. Our fervent aspirations are, that, that influence shall ever be exerted in the cause of our Country, of Justice, of Religion and of Truth. May she do her part to hasten the "good time coming," when man shall rejoice in the existence of Universal Brotherhood, and then the "Garden City of the West" shall have fulfilled her destiny.

JOHN A. BROSS.

ST. XAVIER'S ACADEMY.

NO. 131 WABASH AVENUE.

This Academy is under the charge of the Sisters of Mercy.

COMMON SCHOOLS.

The present system of Common Schools was established in 1840, and is under the control of a board of seven Inspectors, who are appointed annually by the Common Council, and three Trustees in each School District, who receive their appointment from the same source.

There are now within the limits of the city, four spacious brick edifices, erected at a cost of about twenty-five thousand dollars, in which gratuitous instruction is offered to every child between the ages of five and eighteen in the city. There are attending at present, in these schools, some fifteen hundred scholars. To teach this number there are twenty-five teachers engaged. The teachers are paid from the interest of the township school fund; the school houses are built, and the incidental expenses of the schools are defrayed by a general tax upon the property of the city. The school fund is managed by William H. Brown, Esq., the Agent appointed by the Common Council.

The whole effects of the school fund amount to about $142,370 00.

CHICAGO RETREAT FOR THE INSANE.

This Institution was established in August, 1847, by Edward Mead, M. D. It is sufficiently removed from the noise and bustle of the town to afford the invalid all the necessaries which will restore to him mind, reason and health.

Its location is two and a quarter miles North West of the City.

EDWARD MEAD, M. D., Physician.

CHICAGO ORPHAN ASYLUM.

This Institution for the support and education of destitute orphan children, is situated on Wells street, between Van Buren and Harrison. Owing to the large number of heads of families swept away during the two past summers, such an institution is not only very desirable but almost absolutely necessary. Mrs. Bronson has the charge of the children, and endeavors to give to the Institution the character and influence of "home" as far as possible. The following are the names of some of the officers:

W. H. Brown, President; O Lunt, Vice President; Samuel Hoard, Secretary; R. K. Swift, Treasurer; Mrs. Dr. Pitney and Mrs. J. H. Kinzie, Directresses.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

This Institution was incorporated by the Legislature of Illinois, in February, 1843. It has all the rights common to incorporated bodies. The object of the Association is to diffuse knowledge and information throughout the mechanical classes. Its regular meetings are held in the City Saloon, at which place there is also given during the year courses of lectures on the Arts and Sciences, by the best informed and most scientific men in the city for the special benefit of the members. It has Annual Fairs, at which time is exhibited the mechanical genius of the whole State. Connected with the Institute, is a library of two thousand volumes, accessible to the members at all times.
